What is Crizalk:

Crizalk is used to treat metastatic (cancer that has already spread) non-small cell lung cancer that is induced by a defect in a gene called anaplastic lymphoma kinase (ALK). It is an antineoplastic (cancer) agent. Crizalk interferes with the growth of cancer cells, which are eventually destroyed by the body. Crizalk is available only with your doctor's prescription.

Side effects of Crizalk:

A side effect of any drug can be described as the unwanted or undesired effect adduced by the drug. The side effect can be major or in few medications minor that can be ignored. Side effects not only vary from drug to drug, but it also depends on the dose of the drug, the individual sensitivity of the person, brand or company which manufactures it. If side effects vague the actual effect of the medicine, it may be hard to convince the patient to take the drug. Few patients get specific side effects to specific drugs; in that case, a doctor replaces the drug with another. The below-mentioned list is the side effects of Crizalk. If you feel any side effect and it troubles you, do not forget to share with your healthcare practitioner.
